there was much delay. During this delay the flames crossed the street and fastened upon Livingstor's corner. This was the stage at which the progress of the flames was most to be dreaded. Now all work upon the French Hotel block was abandoned and the hose turned upon the Adams House block. After crossing the street the fire made rapid progress, and the streams of water had but little effect. The flames spread thereupon to the Calimberti and Dangheri millinery establishments; Connelly, tailor; James, barber; J. J. Castor, shoemaker; Snyder, baker; Siddons, jeweler, and Chedic, grocer. The country will be surprised at the statement of Minister Young, of China, that the Chinese Government is solicitous in the matter of preventing the emigration of its subjects to America. Mr. Young certainly has been deceived in this matter. It cannot be that all other witnesses, and their name is legion, have misstated the facts, when they relate that the Imperial Government derives large revenues from out of China. This fact has been testified to so frequently, and by such wit nesses, as to make it as much a proven fact as any other fact capable of being estabhowever, leaves a loophole in his testimon; that reveals the cunning of the Chinese rulers, and enables them to say that their laws prohibit immigration, while, at the same time, they gather in the tax levied for the privilege of exporting Chinese laborers. He says: "The laws of Canton explicitly prohibit Chinese from immigrating, but they do not prevent them from going to Hongkong, which is only a sevenhours' ride down the river." Hongkong is a British possession, as much so as any other of her colonial dependencies, and more completely and immediately under control of the Crown than any other English possession abroad. The laws of Canton, therefore, do not, according to Mr. Young's own statement, prohibit immigration, else they would stop the loophole that the Government knows to exist at

The flat contradiction between the state ments of Mr. Young and Dr. Latham (the latter's important testimony appearing in the RECORD-UNION of Saturday last) are compared by the San Francisco Bulletin in its issue of yesterday, and the verdict given in favor of Dr. Latham, whose testimony is corroborated by all the leading authorities on China. The truth is that our representatives in China seldom breathe outside of the official atmosphere, and very rarely get down to the bottom facts regard ing Chinese civilization. As an instance it is testified that a certain well-informed shipmaster, being in one of the chie Chinese cities, called upon a certain United States representative of high rank. The question of Chinese slavery came up.

"It does not exist," said the official "It does exist," retorted the skipper 'right here, under your nose, and you do

This big piece of girl, she virgin (12 years),

I must get $90 for. She big piece girl, worth much more" Thereupon one of the smaller children put up its hands and besought the official to buy it and take it to his home, and the hag added her entreaties. It scarcely need be added that the representative of a Government that abhors all forms of slavery,

Mr. Alsip—They are not binding unless the specifications were also signed. I knew an hour after the last meeting about this ma ter. Mr. Avery told me he had overheard a remark of a contractor relative to the fraud. We got the specifications, and found that certain things had been obliterated. Mr. Avery then went to the other ontractors, and found what they had The London Sensation.

WANTED—A CARRIAGE PAINTER; A action, so far, null and void.

Mr. Croly—The firm of Carle & Croly have been in business for fourteen years, and we have never backed out of a contract yet, and don't wish to do so now. We don't back out withdraw nor sell out figured upon. We went after Mr. Seadler the building.

Mr. Conkling said he had no doubt but hat the Building Committee were satisfied with the specifications. It is wrong, an imposition upon this Board, an insult on this city, and every party connected with it should be fixed out. The hould be fired out. They wanted to cheat the specifications, and coming from the par-ties that it does, I am surprised. You adnit that Carle & Croly figured from octored specifications.

Mr. Croly, who was present, thought it was a wrong charge and said he would Mr. Conklin-I am, sir, quoting the archi- any complicity between Carle & Croly and

Mr. Seadler—I have been instructed by owners to make specifications, so as to give certain men work. I have not been solicited was simply a matter of judgment with me, and the city would get a better building and sooner. The Board is not versed in building business. Mr. Stevens-Well, we are getting versed very fast. I am glad this has come to light. Mr. Alsip—Suppose that this building had been started, and these defeated contractors would see smaller timbers used City School Superintendent Lane: "You than we asked them to figure upon, what to the original specifications. The latter replied that they were in his charge as Chairman of the Building Comsuperintendency of the same, is the object mittee, and he should keep them until asked by the Board to surrender them. Mr. Chadderdon also called for them, and Mr. Avery handed them to the President. Mr. Chadderdon-Mr. Croly, please look at those specifications, and see if they are the ones you figured upon.

W. Frazer, J. Graves, Miss Walb, G. Roberts Mr. Croly-I don't propose to be put on rial, and will therefore examine no paper. The President (examining the specifica ions)-I understand that Carle & Croly will finish the building according to these Mr. Avery-Those are not the original ecifications. See the alteration of figures.

Mr. Chadderdon moved to declare all the oids and the transactions relative to the construction of the building off on account Angeles; W. H. in the least. It would not be as strong, but Mr. Conklin-That is funny. I sugested that once, and I was told it could ot be done without risking the building. Mr. Chadderdon-I think there is but ne way out of this matter, and that is to declare it all off, and commence over again. Mr. Conklin-This is a surprise party to e. We have run against a snag which I don't see how we are to get around. Mr. Slater-I have depended on the Building and Repair Committee entirely Mr. Avery-The Board took the matte ut of their hands. Mr. Conklin-I feel that this Board, and the school system generally, has been imposed upon. I don't think I can compromise a wrong, and I will not. I am in now. He was supposed to be working in pur interest, and when he gives points to contractors, he has done a great wrong. Mr. Conklin-The architect's acknowlgments are such that we must immediely discharge him; and I make a motion nat he be asked to send in his resignation -night, and pass in his bill to the Buildg and Repair Committee for services renred up to this time. Mr. Avery-That would relieve him of dl responsibility.

Mr. Conklin—I don't know what responsibility he has. I don't want him to do any more work for this Board. I emphatally object to his doing anything more r this Board. Mr. Avery-I for one could not consent pay him for his specifications, because ev will have to be drawn over. Mr. Conklin-I leave that to the Buildng and Repair Committee. They can take are of that. The motion was seconded and adopted Mr. Seadler-Am I to hand in my resignation before I settle? I don't think it fair. Two of the committee worked against me from the start. I would rather leave it to the Board. Alsip and Avery both said "that is Mr. Stevens said he had never spoken to the architect. He being the other member of the committee.

Mr. Seadler-I did not allude to Mr. Stevens. I claim nobody on the Board as friend, but would rather trust the affair in ther hands than the Building and Repair mmittee. Dr. Laine-I understand Mr. Croly did not know of the existence of other specifiations than those he figured upon. Mr. Slater—I move that the motion adopted at the last meeting, authorizing the President to sign the contract and bond with Carle & Croly, be rescinded. Mr. Stevens-I second the motion Mr. Croly-Have you a right to do that rithout consulting the contractors? Mr. Stevens-Well, there seems to b omething wrong and crooked, and I will not have anything to do with it, and don't hink this Board will. Dr. Laine-It seems that in this case Carle Croly were favorites with the architect. In order to give them the contract he furnished them with specifications calling for less material, but they were not aware of the deception, and supposed that there was but one set. According to the evidence given here, it appears that they figured in good faith, and the Board, also, in their acts have acted in good faith. You must here and now decide whether or not a fraud has been committed, and if if more than one is implicated, then the contract is void, according to the statute. If there is a presumption of fraud, then you should rescind your action. It is also presumable from what has been stated that Carle & Croly would prefer to proceed with the construction upon the specifications upon which the other contractors figured. Mr. Stevens-While I believe Carle & Croly have acted in good faith, still I think it is for the mutual benefit of all concerned that both parties agree to declare the

In order to bring them back, a warrant was sworn out | will be resumed July 20th. charging them with grand larceny, in taking tools to the value of $200 to $300. Chief

Jackson heard that they were in Los Angeles, and had them arrested and brought back. They managed matters so cleverly, however, that the parties they had injured exerted themselves to secure their release from custody, and were successful. Shortly afterwards they again disappeared, and it transpired that they had again victimized some of those who had felt confidence in them. Warrants were issued for their ar-rest, but they have not been heard of since. One of the means by which they succeeded in swindling was Habel's claim that he The snagsoon expected from the old country a legacy of $12,000.

Last Friday a gentleman of good address, about 35 years of age, called at the station-house and inquired for the Chief of Police. That official not being in, he desired to know who was acting in his stead, and officer Ash referred him to officer Farren. To him the stranger said "Where are Habel and Franks?" Surprised at the interrogatory, Farren responded that the Police Department would be MUCH PLEASED TO KNOW. Then it was the stranger's turn to be puz zled. "Are they not here? I was told at Los Angeles that they were in juil at Sacramento." Farren explained. The stranger then introduced himself as Harry Lewis, of Los Angeles. Friends of Habel, in Germany has said, had farwarded to him. Germany, he said, had forwarded to him $1,248, a legacy left to Habel, and which he had been deputed to take care of and deliver. Farren and Ash mentally referred to the talk of a $12,000 fortune made by Habel, and concluded that Mr. Lewis' statement was probably the correct figure.
